Mr. James A. Grant, a well known citizen of the Armenia section of Chester county, died Sunday at the home of his son, Mr. W. H. Grant, aged about eighty years. The funeral was held at the home of Mr. Grant, where a large number of friends gathered for services by Rev. J. E. Jones. Mr. Grant was a member of the Liberty Baptist church.

The first open cotton bloom of the season was brought to The News office yesterday by Messrs. Jas. and Fred Walker. A bloom, which was not open, was brought Saturday by Richard Reed, colored, of Chester Route 6.

Mr. F. W. Paine, on last Friday, sold his stock of merchandise to Mr. H. I. Scholberg and has discontinued his business, which was located on Wall street. Mr. Paine is considering two or three propositions but in all probability will remain in Chester.

Fire, early Sunday morning, destroyed a corn crib at the County Farm contained a small quantity of corn and provender. The fact that there was no wind explains the severity of the other buildings.

A number of cattle in the Bolton Route section of the county have recently died from blackleg. Mr. J. R. Corwell, V. S. has been doing a considerable amount of vaccinating in that section in the few days.

Mr. R. B. Caldwell, chairman of the Chester county Red Cross, received a message this morning from W. R. Lank, secretary for war council at Washington, bearing congratulatory letters from the national committee, and the nation's call and states that Chester people have demonstrated that they can do big things quickly and well.

A fire Sunday about noon destroyed the dwelling of Mr. H. C. Henry, also the dwelling of Mr. S. R. McPhail, occupied by Mr. A. S. Satterfield and family, and damaged the residence of Mr. M. A. Elliott, on Hinton street. The fire originated in the residence occupied by Mr. Satterfield and was burning when discovered. The heavy rain fell on Mr. Henry, who had 1000 insurance on his home, and furnishings and his loss will amount to approximately $2500. All of the parties saved some of their household goods but they were considerably damaged by fire and handling.

The Chester County Highway Commission yesterday morning sold the $450,000 of bonds which were voted by the county last March for road improvements, to the National Exchange Bank, The Peoples National Bank, The Commercial Bank, The Commercial Bank and The Bank of Blackstock, which bid $4.00 per $100 and secured interest was the only bid submitted. The law specifies that the bonds would be sold for less than par and although the commission asked for bids on two other occasions none offered more than $3.75. It is expected that work on the roads will commence in the near future and a Federal engineer is scheduled to arrive in Chester about July 10th for the purpose of surveying some roads the commission expects to receive federal aid on.

NOTE OF THANKS.

We wish to thank those who assisted us last Sunday at the time we lost our home by fire.

Death Of Former Chester Man.

The many friends of Mr. W. C. Hicklin in Chester and Chester county will regret to learn of his death, which occurred yesterday morning at his home in Chester.

Mr. Hicklin, born an illness of several months.

Mr. Hicklin was born and raised in Chester county, where he resided most of his life, and when he moved to Ebersburg.

At the time of his death he was in his 77th year. He was married three times. His first wife was Miss Christine Backstrom, and one son, James Hicklin, survives this union.

His second wife was Miss Ester Poag, three children surviving this union, being A. W. Hicklin of Schenectady, N. Y., Frank Hicklin of Ebersburg, and Harry Hicklin, army service at Charleston, his wife, who was Miss Hannah Poag survives him, with one son, W. C. Hicklin, by his union.

Mr. Hicklin had devoted his life to farming and was most successful in his splendid career from early youth.

He served in the War Between the Sections in the Confederate army and lost his right arm at the second Battle of Manassas.

His last illness, however, of Phlegm, Croup, and Pneumonia, and his remains will be taken there for burial and burial.

COTTON COMES DOWN.

What happened on the Chicago Board of Trade in the matter of what has happened on the Liverpool market, in the matter of the cotton, has been the subject of much conversation in both cases who had been overzealous in trading with what they did not have in hand.

On the other hand, the cotton exchanges promptly closed, ostensibly in the public interest but really to prevent the game from running half the participants.

Our Real Wealth.

To go out of the world as poor as we came into it is one of life's unenvied tragedies. We may not all be able to understand this, but we must be, but that is only because we have unconsciously failed to bring about such a tragedy in our own lives. The possession of riches is the sum total of existence for many persons, and to the general mind the man who lacks money lacks also the ability to enjoy life to the utmost. However, that may be, and however comfortable a feeling it is to have a well-filled purse with which to supply our creature comforts, the far-sighted, sensible person is forced to admit that the possession of money is not really essential either to our happiness or our well-being. At best it is only ours for a limited time, and when the call comes and life is ended for us we go away empty-handed as far as our actual wealth is concerned. We must not value money for its own sake, but for its equivalent in those things which advance our best interests. We must learn first to value the better things of life, and to find enjoyment in its most intellectual and highest material side. We need only to have our minds and our natures educated to an appreciation of the healing and broadening influence of the more advanced side of life to make us yearn for their possession, and it is in such circumstances that we may truly possess wealth, able to gratify those desires which are likely to make us better men and women. A single piece of money can mean the possession of itself any more than a million such pieces, but the wise application of such can take us through new roads into pleasant lands of thoughts and desires which will improve us morally and intellectually. Heavily wisely interpreted cannot fail to exert its ennobling influence, and it is such influences which help to make us life and understand it, and to make us life and understand it, and to make us life and understand it.

We may not carry with us into the other life the gold and silver which we have hoarded, but we can carry with us the power into healthy channels and obtained for others as well as for ourselves bits of brightness and happiness and joyousness through their proper use. We shall not find out kinds empty, for useless when the final summons comes. We shall be able to make a good accounting of our stewardship and to show that we did not try to distort values in this world out of their true proportion. Money has its good uses, and when these are kept in mind the chances are that we shall be able to avoid the pitfalls which honeycomb certain conditions of existence. To learn to know the higher side of life, to lose our fear of not meeting up to its responsibilities, to assume our moral obligations in entire confidence, to be able to discharge them worthily, to be able to participate in the clouds of doubt that sometimes obscure our vision and see beyond into the clear sky of hope and faith, to treasure those personal moral resources which transform life at times—these are some of the results which come to those of us who to participate in life as it is to know how to make our material riches lead us into a better appreciation of the higher, better, more lasting and more lasting phases of life.

It is not necessary, however, to possess worldly wealth to make us morally rich. The possession of material facilities is all that we need with which to make a start in life, and it is upon their proper development, their careful cultivation, and their wise use that so large a part of our future happiness depends. Possessed of the underlying principles of a true and successful character, we may easily and most naturally, and in the end shall see clearly that real happiness, real progress, and real merit are dependent not upon the riches of this world, but upon our own individual ability to make a good record in life. Given these conditions we shall not go out of this world poorer than when we entered it; we shall have something in our hands that will last forever, something deeper and vaster and more enduring than all the wealth of the world, something that will lead us on before the throne of grace. The ability to accumulate the wealth of the higher moral side of existence and the power to share that wealth with those about us; the ability to seek the work which will give life and culture to them for our own good and for the good of others—these are some of the gifts that shall fill our hands when life is over. They may be of very great value from a worldly standpoint, but they help us to lead useful lives and to leave behind us the fragrance of fine thoughts and good deeds.

THE FINANCIAL SLACKER.

The subscription to the Liberty Loan by the heroic work of tens of thousands of volunteers in the cause has stimulated the activity and the thought of the whole country on the war situation, but the number of subscriptions was not one-third as great as it should have been. The bankers of the country who led in this work at the beginning of the subscription, there were 10,000,000 subscribers the loan would not have reached the popular sentiment of the country to the extent necessary for the best results. This may have been too high an estimate, but it was based on the fact that the last loan, in Great Britain had nearly 4,000,000 subscribers, or one out of every six in population. A similar percentage in this country would give about 18,000,000 more. That, however, was not to be expected.

The loan was oversubscribed due to the magnificent work of many people in all sections of the country, and to the aid rendered by newspapers and periodicals, but an interesting fact in view of the bitterness with which Wall Street is constantly assailed by narrow-minded people, that New York contributed more than half of the total of $2,000,000,000, showing a patriotism which in proportion to population and wealth far exceeded that shown in 90 per cent of the country.

All through the country there were subscriptions of a thousand or two dollars from men who should have subscribed to ten, twenty or thirty times as much.

Another loan, however, will have to be taken within the next three or four months, and we shall have to keep on issuing new loans to the extent, probably of $5,000,000,000 to $10,000,000,000 a year, and the country must of necessity absorb them.

The campaign for broadening the interest of the people of the whole country in these war loans must, therefore, be continued with unabated energy, and men who subscribed a mere pittance for the Liberty Loan must be ashamed, if no other way is available, into a subscription in keeping with their ability for the coming loan.

This raises the question as to how the country shall reach those of its progressive people who refused to become subscribers to the Liberty Loan. There are many men of large wealth in this country who have little subscription in their souls and hearts.

If large wealth, who, although citizens, are still more interested in Germany than in this country, who will not subscribe to these loans, who are on a begrudging basis, and some of them will not subscribe at all unless compelled to do so.

We believe that the National Government must find a way to thoroughly investigate cases of this kind, and under some law, possibly yet to be passed, compel subscriptions from people of this kind and make them, in this way contribute to the welfare of the nation.

There are many men of this class who are neither giving themselves up contributing their money to the nation's life. They are keeping their own hides whole and using their business and their capacity to make money for their own selfish ends. They are not giving their money or their time and their energy to the nation's welfare. A way must be found to reach these "slackers" because of their pro-German proclivities or of their disposition to "hog" it all and use their money for larger earnings at the expense of their fellow-citizens. We hunt out and imprison the slacker for army service, let us hunt out and make a part of his money of the slacker in financial operations who fails to do his duty by the Government or imprisonment him—Manufacturers' Record.

AIR MASTERY IN NEW MOTOR.

Detroit, June 21—A super airplane motor, designed to conquer the skies for the Allies, help to sweep the seas of German submarines and end the war speedily, has been perfected by a prominent Detroit engineer, whose name is withheld.

The new motor is said to be the most powerful internal combustion engine ever contrived, and it is necessary for the men operating it to wear muffs to protect their ears.

The average life of the ordinary airplane motor is sixty hours. At the end of that time the motor has to be rebuilt. The United States Aviation Material Administration estimates that its life is determined only by the life of the pilot itself.

An Ordinance

An Ordinance To Provide For The Improvement Of Columbia Street and To Levy An Assessment For One-half The Cost Of Improvement Upon the Owners Of Abutting Property.

Whereas, a petition signed by a majority of the owners of property abutting on the east side of Columbia street from Main street to Hinton street, and thence on the west side of said Columbia street to and including the premises of S. E. Wylie, and praying for the construction of a cement sidewalk on said side of said street between said points, under the Act of 1915, has been filed with the clerk of this council:

Now, therefore, be it ordained by the Mayor and Board of Aldermen of the City of Chester, in council assembled, and by the authority of the same:

That a cement sidewalk is hereby ordered to be constructed on the east side of Columbia street, from Main street to Hinton street, and on the west side of Columbia street, from Hinton street to and including the premises of S. E. Wylie, according to specifications of city engineer, at a cost not exceeding ninety cents per square yard; that a sum equal to one-half the cost of said work and hereby is appropriated out of the city treasury to be used solely to defray the cost of the city's one-half of said work, and an amount equal to one-half the cost of said work is hereby assessed upon the owners of property abutting upon the said Columbia street between said points to be levied upon said owners, in proportion to the linear frontage upon said sides of said Columbia street respectively owned by them.

That the city engineer shall prepare an accurate survey and estimate of said part of said street, showing the frontage of each property owner liable to assessment, and when the cost of said work is ascertained shall prepare an accurate roll of the amount of assessment for which each property-owner is liable, and enter same in a book to be kept by the city clerk under the title "Assessment Book" in which satisfaction shall be entered upon payment in full of each such assessment.

Provided, that before entering said amounts in said book, said clerk shall publish notice that said roll is on file in his office, and the property owner affected shall have one week in which to file objections to said assessments, upon hearing which objections council shall modify or approve said assessments, and shall then be entered in said Assessment Book accordingly.

We believe that the amount of assessments hereby levied upon said property-owners respectively shall be due and payable within thirty days after the date of the assessment, and the clerk shall collect legal interest upon all amounts collected after the same are paid, said amount to be used solely in paying for said work.

Done and ratified in council this 20th day of November, A. D. 1916.

JOIN THE RED CROSS

By joining or assisting the Red Cross Society you help the wounded soldiers and also help to keep down disease in the army.

By keeping our soldiers well you help win the war.

The following will give you an idea of the sickness in previous years.

In the Mexican war 6 died of disease to 1 from wounds. In the Crimean war France lost 10 men by sickness for every one killed. In our own Civil War 2 died from disease for each one shot.

During the France-Prussian war 12 Germans died of sickness to every one killed in battle. But modern hygiene was so far ahead at the time of the recent Russo-Japanese war that the world was startled by the fact that for the first time in the history of armies there was only one death from disease for every 2 men who died fighting. In the present great war sanitation is working on a super-scale, and modern hygiene is rapidly cutting down the excessive death rate.

The better the health of our army the sooner we will win.
